WHAT OUR CARD HOLDERS SAY

“I find this card very good with airports because of the disability symbol. Everyone around the world understands it.”

Hannah

“I have fibromyalgia and I have a National Disability Card. I use it on the train and the staff always ask me if I need assistance. My mobility can vary day to day - wearing my Verified Hidden Disability lanyard gives me the confidence to go out and it's recognisable to a lot of people and places.”

Sonja

“Having the National Disability Card on a lanyard has made a real difference in my daily life. It meant I didn't have to keep explaining my condition to people, which can be exhausting. Just having it visible helped me feel more understood and less anxious in busy places. It's taken a weight off my shoulders and given me more confidence when I'm out and about.”

Yaqov

“I use a Blue Badge but the National Disability Card is much more use, I wear it whenever I am out. It's an immediate visual aid that has had an ability without words to calm difficult situations.”

Chris

“I've been using the National Disability Card for 3 years and I genuinely think peace of mind and not having to explain your access needs when you have hidden disabilities is priceless.”

Felicity

“Nimbus is good for access but we have a National Disability Card for our child and it's so much better because people see the disabled sign and they just understand, worked really well especially abroad.”
